U.S. Army during World War II and the Korean Conflict. The Pickens Sentinel carried the following article: Lt. G.H. Hendricks Awarded Bronze Star. U.S. Army Headquarters, Pacific Ocean Areas.--First Lieutenant George H. Hendricks, Jr., of Easley, S.C., has been awarded the Bronze Star by Major General Paul I. Mueller, Commanding General, 81st "Wildcat" Infantry Division, for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against the Japanese on Peleliu Island. During one of the bloodiest phases of the battle for Peleliu, the rifle company in which Lt. Hendricks was a platoon leader suffered heavy casualties, including the company commander. The lieutenant assumed temporary command of the company, and seeing the necessity of maneuvering it to a more tenable position, proceeded to do this over rough and steep terrain where it was impossible to move without exposing its members to enemy fire.

This was accomplished with a minimum of casualties.

Mary Constance Carpenter --- A Five-Star mother

Mrs. Cely taught at Concrete School in Anderson County 32 years. During World War II, she was a Five Star Mother. In 1955 she was awarded the Woodmen of the World plaque for commendable service in community, state, Nation in appreciation for many hours of unselfish service to the community as a teacher of youth, a devoted Christian and an example of unselfishness and womanly goodness.

John Harvey Ariail line

The following is a bio, written by Steve Belli, of the five men, every son of Constance Carpenter Cely, who served their country in WW II. The following is the reason she was designated as a 5-star mother.

The line of ancestors going back to Climelia Abigail Ariail – sister of William Harrison Ariail – is as follows:

The 5 Cely brothers, sons of Mary Constance Carpenter, Daughter of Jessie Ida Hunt
Daughter of Mary Lucreita Hamilton (whose husband died in the Civil War)
Daughter of Climelia Abigail Ariail
Daughter of John Harvey Ariail

Quote:

FIVE BROTHERS WHO WENT TO WAR

The five Cely brothers shouldered the burdens of the family when their father died. Two months later came Pearl Harbor and they shouldered the burdens of their country as well.

They would leave their mother and sister behind on the family's Powdersville farm to serve.

"We were healthy and we were going to be drafted," said Charles Cely, who was 28 and married at the time. "We accepted it."

In the next four years of world war, the five Cely brothers shared different experiences on three continents.

Faith, patriotism, respect and sense of commitment to help others were qualities that the five brothers said helped them get through the tragic events that followed.

It's those qualities that they say separates their generation from those that followed.

"The men I was around, they were true to their country. You could count on one another. You could depend on one another. You don't do that now," said Raymond Cely, who spent nearly a year of his service in a Nazi prison camp.

The Cely brothers --- Charles, Raymond, Jim, Wallace and Brooks ---- had been through the Depression and knew what hard times were.

"We realize the value of working and saving, but this generation --- our children --- doesn't appreciate that," Charles said.

Raymond said those values combined with their faith and strict discipline helped them accept responsibility and the calls of duty.

Three of the five had close calls.

Wallace, who had been serving with the ROTC at Clemson College when the war started, flew missions to identify bridges and develop plans for blowing them up to slow down the Germans as part of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers', Wallace once stepped off a bridge just before the Germans blew it up.

Raymond, knowing he would be drafted, enlisted after high school and eventually became a tech sergeant for the 9th Air force Division. During his 59th flight on May 29, 1944, the B-26 he was flying in was shot down on the outskirts of Paris.

He doesn't remember how he got out of the plane or pulled his rip cord.

"I was in space coming to Earth. The chute opened and the plane hit the ground about the same time. The heat from the crash shot up in my face," Raymond said.

With several broken bones, Raymond was taken in by a French family, but eventually turned over to the Germans, where he began his stay in a prison camp.

There, he recalled trading cigarettes for cheese, and he lost 45 pounds.

"They would bring in a bucket of barley soup and that's what you would have all day for 24 men," Raymond said. "We ate cats and dogs ---- anything that came through."

Raymond's prison camp was liberated by the Russians in early 1945.

Miles away, his brother Brooks, who joined the Marines before the war in 1938, fought in the Pacific as part of the first Marine Division.

Much of his time was spent in the Solomon Islands, Guadalcanal, Guam, New Zealand and other areas of the Pacific.

Heavy rains, mosquitoes and nighttime battles with the Japanese fill Brooks' memories. Besides casualties from battle, Brooks said the men had another war on their hands with malaria.

"There were times when you wanted to give up and you didn't care if you would live or not --- that's how bad it was," he said.

Brooks ended his tour of duty in late 1944 after 30 months in the Pacific.

Both Charles and Jim Cely, who were drafted, stayed in the United States during the war. Jim, who served despite having only one eye because of a fishing accident, worked in an Army infantry office at Ft. Gordon in Georgia.

Charles performed home-side duties for the Army Air Force.

Charles said he never understood war and why people would want to kill each other. He recalled a time when he guarded German prisoners of war at a camp near Biloxi, Miss.

When all five were reunited several months before the victory over Japan, there were no parties and no parades waiting for them.

"Everybody just went home and went to work," Charles said.

The brothers say the war's impact on their lives has been one of character building and discipline.

"For a while there, everybody had a harder outlook on life. You didn't take as many things for granted," said Brooks, who went on to serve a total of 27 years of active and reserve duty in the Marines.

Raymond added, "War is hell if you've ever been through it --- hell on all sides --- but when you come out of it, you're a stronger man."

Charles believes it was faith in God and a strong mother, Constance Cely, that kept all five of them alive.

"She loved us all and brought us up to respect each other and love each other and that kept us together," he said.

All five brothers were involved in starting Cely Brothers Lumber Co. in 1948. The company still runs with the help of 81-year-old Charles as Cely Construction.

Both Wallace and Jim died of cancer in the 1970s, Brooks and Raymond are retired. Unquote.

Clower Brown Hinton
U.S. Navy, WW II Per cousin Barbara Nell Cargal, he was on the battleship Maryland during the Pearl Harbor attack.
The following is what happened to the ship next to where Clower Brown Hinton's ship was moored:

*Pearl Harbor Raid, 7 December 1941 --
USS Oklahoma and USS Maryland during the Pearl Harbor Attack*

*On 7 December 1941, USS Maryland (BB-46) was moored inboard of USS Oklahoma (BB-37), and was thus protected by her when Japanese torpedo planes struck. The unfortunate Oklahoma, an older ship with much less adequate protection against underwater damage, was hit by up to nine torpedoes.
Her hull's port side was opened almost completely from below the forward gun turret back to the third turret, a distance of over 250 feet. She listed quickly, her port bilge struck the harbor bottom, and she then rolled almost completely over.
Oklahoma came to rest less than twenty minutes after she was first hit. Some of her starboard underwater hull and the starboard propeller were now all that showed above the surface of Pearl Harbor.*

*Some of Oklahoma's men were still alive inside her upturned hull, and their rescue became the focus of an intense effort over the next two days.
Thirty-two Sailors were recovered alive, but* over four-hundred were killed. In 1943, the capsized ship was rolled upright and raised in one of the salvage profession's greatest undertakings, but she was not further repaired.

Maryland was hit by two bombs, which caused relatively light damage and some flooding forward. Four of her men lost their lives. The battleship was able to steam to the west coast for final repairs later in December and was fully returned to service in February 1942.

35th Inf. The 35th Inf. Regiment was organized at Camp Washburn, Milwaukee, Wis., the last company being mustered into the service of the United States on the 27th day of Feb., 1864. The regiment left the State on the 18th day of April, proceeding to New Orleans, and from thence to Port Hudson, where a few weeks were spent in guard and patrol duty. In August the 35th was assigned to active campaign work in Louisiana and Arkansas, in which it continued until February, 1865, when under orders it proceeded to New Orleans and joined the forces in the campaign against Mobile. After the surrender of the Confederates at this place the regiment continued until June in service in southern Alabama. It was then transferred to Brazos, Santiago, Texas, and continued in active service at different points near the mouth of the Rio Grande until March 15, 1866, when it was mustered out of service. It returned to Madison, Wi., and was finally paid off and discharged on April 16, 1866.

Lowry Hale Farnham – G-grandson of Dr. Jonathan
Davis Hale of Tennessee, Chief Scout for the Army of the Cumberland. Husband of Marjorie Sherar, descendant of Marie Anne Ariail of Canada.

Lowry graduated 1943 from Western High School,
Washington, D. C. and was accepted to Naval Aviation Cadet training at UVA, Roanoke College and Williams College, MA, then Pensacola NAS. Lowry received his wings and an Ensign's commission late 1944. After discharge from active duty at the end of WWII, Lowry served as a Lieutenant with USNR Fighter Squadron VF-661 while earning his B. S. in Aeronautical Engineering at Catholic University, Washington, D. C. in 1949.

He was called back to active duty July 1951 as Project
Officer in the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics Fighter Design Branch. Lowry's skills as a pilot, engineer and analyst helped the Navy develop better carrier-based aircraft during the Korean War, for which he received the National Defense Service Medal; in 1999, John Glenn described their work in his A Memoir. From 1959 - mid-1965, Lowry served as a Special Assistant to the Under Secretary of the Navy for aircraft Logistics; from 1988 - mid-1993 he served his country as computer security analyst for The Army Research Institute.
